

JAPS ARE INVADING

American Homes in San Francisco Residence Districts.

DRIVING THE AMERICANS OUT

A Deplorable State of Affairs in the Golden Gate City.

San Francisco, April 18.—The Japanese are slowly but surely driving Americans out of their own homes in the best residence districts of this city.

While wives and mothers and housekeepers walk the streets in search of new apartments, the little brown men and women look down upon them from the windows of apartment buildings that once housed only Caucasians.

At least a dozen streets in San Francisco that were once high-class residence streets are now packed exclusively with Japs.

How can the coolie drive the American from his home? Well, stranger, it is thusly:

San Francisco has a fine residence district. A suite of rooms can be rented for $25 to $35 a month. Then come the Japs. The landlord doubles the rents.

"This is an outrage!" declares the tenant. "Besides, the neighborhood is getting cheap. Japanese poolrooms and barber shops are starting in the same block. Japanese children are playing with my own little ones."

"Ah!" cries the agent. "There you have it, the Japs are offering more for your flat than I am asking you now. I could rent it for $100 inside of a week."

The tenant forgets his anger in amazement and asks more questions. He learns that the seven rooms in which he quarters from six to eight people will provide "comfortable accommodations" for half a hundred little brown men, women and children. The basement will house a barber shop, laundry office and poolroom. The front parlor will hold eight cots, for which $5 per month can easily be obtained. In addition to this, the bathroom, from which the tub is immediately removed, will put up a couple of guests, and the back porch is good for from four to six more. Blank may not be a rapid calculator, but he knows the rudiments of the multiplication table, and asks no more questions. He moves.

The Jap school question is settled; at least for the present, by complete submission to the Mikado. But another problem, one that is growing to more alarming proportions every year, is the Japanization of Western America.

There is one circumstance that dangerously complicates this latter problem. That circumstance is that the Easterner does not appreciate the situation in the West, particularly California, and never will understand it until he lives among the Japanese.

The East is prejudiced in favor of the little brown men. In the West the sentiment against him is hurrying along with a seven-league boot stride. It is a fact, and there is no use denying it, that the Western working man would much rather work beside a negro than a Jap. What the race war is in the South, the Jap war will soon be in the West.

Although the Golden Gate city is not proud of the fact, the Japanization of San Francisco is well advanced. To eastern cities this may sound foolish. To the San Franciscan, who is being driven slowly, but irresistibly into the sea by the Japanese merchant and tradesman, it is a startling reality. It is a question of a greater San Francisco or a lesser Nagasaki, with the condition rapidly increasing.—By C. H. Tavaner.

Squelching the Drug Clerk.

The drug clerk was young and he had a large and impressive scarf pin, and he had a very superior way of looking through his glasses, which nipped his nose arrogantly. The meek customer had asked for a pinch of soda in some water, to relieve his indigestion, and the drug clerk loftily said:

"You want some sodium bicarbonate in aqua pura quantum suff?"

"Maybe," replied the meek customer, "unless you've got some nil desperandum."

The clerk sought among the bottles and finally announced that they were just out.

"Well, have you got any multum in parvo?"

The clerk examined all the emulsions and pulverizations in the store and reported that they had none, but could order it for him.

"I'll get it elsewhere, but maybe you have a little vice versa with ad infinitum."

The store was also out of that.

"Then I could get along, I suppose, with a few ounces of de gustibus non disputandum."

"I never heard of that," confessed the clerk, weakly.

"It's a new preparation. Give me some facilis descensus Avernus, then."

But the facilis bottle seemed to be empty.

The clerk was looking at the customer with grave doubts by this time, so the latter observed:

"I'll look a little further down the street, but if you get in a stock of sal Atticum I wish you would keep some for me."

After the clerk had told his employer about the strange wants of the meek customer the proprietor led him kindly to the dictionary, and set him to studying the back part thereof.

Cured Hemorrhages of the Lungs.

"Several years since my lungs were so badly affected that I had many hemorrhages," writes A. M. Ake, of Wood, Ind. "I took treatment with several physicians without any benefit. I then started to take Foley's Honey and Tar, and my lungs are now as sound as a bell. I recommend it in advanced stages of lung troubles." Foley's Honey and Tar stops the cough and heals the lungs, and prevents serious results from a cold. Refuse substitutes. Sold by J. H. Williams, Hartford, Ky.

Buys an Island for $160.

Washington, April 17.—Henry D. Nixon, of Newport, Ind., bought an island yesterday afternoon for the low price of $160.05. For the first time in the history of the Government, an entire island was sold under the hammer at the general land office. The island is situated in the Wabash river, one mile from Newport, and contains nine and seven-tenths acres. There were several bidders, but it was knocked down to Mr. Nixon at $16.50 per acre.

Mr. Nixon informed the officials that he intends to improve the island and establish a summer resort there. The selling price was a disappointment, and unless the market for islands gets more bullish, there probably will never be another auction sale like this one.

HIS JOURNEY'S END.

What He Now Finds as a Reward for His Labor.

SAD STORY OF A RUINED LIFE.

Last Experience of a Man Who Lived by Beating Other Men.

The Cincinnati Post preaches this striking and able sermon to its readers through the life of James W. McNally, which should be read and framed, then hung on the wall:

With the paupers on Hart's island, where the Sound ebbs and flows past New York, there is a broken-down man. He stretches his hands up to the blue above him, and a sob comes into his voice when he speaks of the past.

It is James W. McNally, once King of the Green Goods men.

"Look at me!" he says, bitterly. "Think of the days when I owned half of the Tenderloin, carried the police of two cities in my waistcoat pocket, and spent $15,000 a week!"

"The other men here won't look at me," he went on, choking. "Why won't they? They have been honest. They've not the memory of hearts broken, homes wrecked or the blood-stained faces of suicides to haunt their last hour!"

The old man sat twitching and shaking. On one side was the skyline of the city where for twenty years he pursued his reckless way; on the other is potter's field. It is waiting for him, and he knows it.

It is the tragedy of a wasted life.

"In the twenty years following the day that I listened to the temptations of Barney Maguire," he said, brokenly, "and left my honest job at $10 a week, to the day I went to Joliet prison, I made first and last nearly $1,500,000. Look at me now!"

He raised his hands impressively. "Listen!" he said, "For every dishonest dollar gained, the gainer spends two—one in money and one in peace of mind. There is no escape. I have learned my lesson at last. Let my fate and the fate of others like me be a warning. If any father has a son with a weakness toward the life of the night and Broadway, let him bring that boy to me!"

Need anything more be said?

Here is a sermon whose text is a human life, whose argument is a perverted ambition, and whose climax is a hopeless heart.

He who dares must pay the piper. It is inevitable. McNally knows it. We know it. You know it.

DELICATE CHILDREN.

Advice to Hartford Mothers Who Have Delicate Children.

If we could only make all fathers and mothers in Hartford regard what we say there would be fewer sickly, delicate children on our streets.

Rapidly growing children need a great deal of vitality. They grow fast, play hard, and work too hard at school, and many such children are tired, thin, pale and worn when they ought to be robust and rosy.

Every run-down, growing child in Hartford should take Vinol, our delicious cod liver preparation without oil. It requires almost no digestion at all and cannot upset delicate, "weakened" stomachs as do old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions. Vinol also contains peptonate of iron.

It strengthens the digestive organs, makes new vitality, sound flesh and muscle tissue, strong bone structure and pure, rich, red blood. Vinol fills out hollow cheeks and makes thin little arms and legs plump and round.

Said Mr. Griffin, of the firm of Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro., our local druggists: "We cannot recommend Vinol too highly for puny, weak and ailing children, to build up the run-down, over-worked, tired and debilitated, or to give renewed vitality to the aged, and we cheerfully refund the money in every case where it fails." Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro., druggists.

Note—While we are sole agents for Vinol in Hartford, it is now for sale at the leading drug store in nearly every town and city in the country. Look for the Vinol agency in your town.

Mr. Addison has lived in Knightstown all his life and was graduated from the high school there, a few years ago at the head of his class. He is a prominent and active member of the Christian church of his city, is at present the leading elder, president of the official board, and has been superintendent of the Sunday School continuously for the last 11 years.

Children Draw Davis Statue Through Streets.

Richmond, Va., April 17.—The bronze statue of Jefferson Davis, for the elaborate monument to Mr. Davis to be unveiled here June 3, was drawn through the streets of the city to the monument site to-day by some 2,500 or 3,000 children, who did the hauling by means of a double rope some two or three squares long. The children were led by Lee and Pickett Camps of the Confederate Veterans, and these in turn, were headed by a handsomely uniformed boy life and drum corps. Many of the girls among the children were dressed in white, and a large proportion of them carried small Confederate battle-flags, which they waved throughout the march. The scene was especially inspiring and was witnessed by thousands of people. The rope used in hauling the statue was, after the ceremony, cut into many thousands of pieces for souvenirs.

Woman Suffrage in Kansas.

At the Republican primary just held in Topeka 6048 men voted and 4334 women. The day was cold and stormy, the streets deep in mud, and the faction opposed to the law and order ticket had preempted all the hacks.

The use of many private carriages was given for the day, but it is reported that hundreds of women in all parts of the city refused to ride saying that others needed carriages more and that they could walk. Of the men 3,344 voted for the law and order candidate and 2,704 against him; of the women 2,883 voted for him and 1,431 against. It is just 20 years since Kansas gave Municipal suffrage to women and in his recent annual message the Governor recommended full suffrage because the municipal suffrage experiment had been so successful.
